F.D.R. May Ask Embargo Against Shipment Of Arms To Spaniards

BRITISH SCORE LICENSE GIVEN TO JERSEY MAN

Robert Cruse to Sell Huge Orders of Planes, Motors to Loyalist Forces

BULLETIN
LONDON, Dec. 29.—(UP)—Resentment was evident in British quarters today over the American licensing for export to the Spanish loyalists of nearly $3,000,000 worth of airplanes, airplane motors and airplane parts. The British view was that the action threatened to undermine latest European efforts to make non-intervention in the Spanish civil war a reality.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—(UP)—President Roosevelt may ask congress next week to rush through a bill granting him special authority to proclaim an embargo on sale or shipment of arms and munitions to any faction in Spain, it was indicated today.

Big Shipment Looms
Administration officials were anxious to the necessity for immediate legislation by the action of Robert Cruse, Jersey City, N. J., exporter, in obtaining licenses from the state department to ship $2,777,000 worth of airplanes, motors and spare parts, to Bilbao, Spain. Granting of such licenses was in direct violation of the government's declared neutrality policy, but the state department had no legal authority to refuse the export permits.

Officials indicated they were concerned less with the seriousness of this relatively large shipment of airplanes and engines to Spain than they were by the breaking of government disapproval of all sales and shipments of war materials to the belligerent factions in Spain.

With the Cruse license as a precedent it was indicated, other requests for export licenses for shipment of war supplies may be forthcoming. The next may be for a license to export rifles, pistols, machine-guns and ammunition.

Victims of Spanish War—But They Didn't Fight

JUDGE REFUSES TO ALLOW SALE OF 186 ACRES

Sale of 186 acres of Scioto township land on Dec. 15 in a partition suit was set aside Monday by Judge Joseph W. Adkins of common pleas court.

The land was purchased by Addison Thorne Squire, Ashville, in her suit against Jacob R. Thorne, deceased, and others, for $9,600 or about two-thirds of the appraised value. The partition suit had been filed in court in 1932. Judge Adkins contended the land did bring its true value. Another sale was ordered.

The property included four tracts with appraisals ranging from $40 to $75 an acre.

SPANISH RETAIN NAZI ARMS, FREE CAPTURED SHIP

BIARRITZ, France, Dec. 29.—(UP)—A radio message broadcast by the Bilbao, Spain, radio station, asserted that the German steamship Palos, seized by loyalists off Bilbao, left there this morning.

It was asserted that the ship left without a cargo of arms which, the Bilbao broadcast said, the Palos carried when it was seized.

(The German government denied that the Palos carried any cargo which might be classed as war material.—Ed.)

According to the Bilbao report, the Palos' release was the result of negotiations carried on by radio between the Basque provincial government there and the commander of the German cruiser Koenigsberg. The agreement, it was asserted, was that the ship should be freed but that its war materials should be retained.

According to the Bilbao broadcast the Palos contained a large cargo of field wireless sets and raw materials intended for use in manufacture of explosives and aerial bombs.

The German cruiser, it was said, demanded last night on its arrival off Bilbao the immediate release of the Palos.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 29.—(UP)—Sergeant Pat Conlon and Patrolman James Simpson were in temporary retirement today. Sent to kill a skunk they fired five shots each and missed. The animal "fired" once and scored.

COMMISSIONERS PURCHASE CARLOAD OF COAL AT $3.98

Commissioners purchased a carload of West Virginia nut coal for the courthouse heating plant Monday from the Pickaway Grain Co., on a bid of $3.98 per ton.

NOTHING could depict the tragedy of the Spanish civil war more than this pitiful sight of the bodies of two children, a boy and a girl, blasted to their deaths in Madrid by bombs from Fascist planes.

WILL TO DIVIDE $4,000 PROPERTY OF MISS PHELPS

The will of Miss Charlotte Phelps, former public health nurse, was admitted to probate Monday by Judge C. C. Young.

Miss Florence Dunton, S. Court street, is bequeathed one share of preferred stock of the Telephone Bond & Share Co. Real estate in Canandaigua, N. Y. is given a sister, Mrs. Stella Spencer. Personal property is to be converted into cash and is bequeathed to another sister of Canandaigua, Mrs. Esther Witter.

The will was written Nov. 25, 1936, and names Meeker Terwilliger as executor. Lawrence Johnson, O. S. Howard and George F. Grand-Girard are appraisers. The estate is estimated at $4,000.

HAZEL LANMAN NEW SECRETARY OF PROSECUTOR

Miss Hazel Lanman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Lanman, Wayne township, has been employed as secretary by George E. Gerhardt, local attorney who assumes office as county prosecutor Jan. 4.

Miss Lanman is a graduate of Circleville high school in the class of 1932. She took business training at Office Training School, Columbus. She has been employed by the State Farm Bureau, Columbus.

PHYSICIAN SAYS MIRACLE NEEDED TO SAVE PONTIFF

PARIS, Dec. 29.—(UP)—The newspaper Journal quoted an unnamed Vatican doctor today as saying that only a miracle could save the pope. The physician was said to have added that it was "a question of days."

It has been understood that Prof. Amintore Milani, the pope's personal physician, is the only doctor in attendance on him.

LENGTHY ILLNESS PROVES FATAL TO NELSON DUNN, 82

Nelson Dunn, 82-year-old resident of Williamsport, died Tuesday at 8 a. m. after a lingering illness. The funeral will be Thursday at 2 p. m. in the Williamsport Methodist church, with the Rev. D. H. Householder officiating. Burial will be in Springlawn cemetery by S. B. Metzgar.

Mr. Dunn was born Oct. 30, 1854. He is survived by his widow, Eva Rebecca Fee Dunn, whom he married Jan. 20, 1874, and three children, Anna Davidson, at home; Maude Donahue, Atlanta; and Harry Dunn, of Chillicothe.

HARBAGE VICTOR IN HIS CONTEST AGAINST SOLONS

COLUMBUS, Dec. 29.—(UP)—The case of Taxpayer Arnett Harbage, West Jefferson farmer, against the legislature's mileage claims, seemed today to have developed into an academic question.

Judge Charles Leach granted Harbage a temporary injunction yesterday restraining State Auditor Joseph Tracy from paying state representatives $21,705 for mileage expense for trips they did not make to the capital.

The question of granting a permanent injunction will be heard later after Clarence Laylin, attorney for the legislators, has filed a brief with the court.

But Laylin cannot file his answer and have the case heard by Dec. 31, on that day, legal authorities held, the appropriation from which the mileage would have been paid lapses. Hence even if Judge Leach held that the legislature by parliamentary steps met while not actually in Columbus there would be no fund from which to pay the $21,705.

Liars' Club Judges Facing Task

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—(UP)—Three judges met today to pick the world's champion liar, the teller of the tallest tale in the 1936 Burlington (Wis.) liars' contest.

There were stories of hair tonic that grew nap on rugs, mosquitoes that munched on bald eagles, and flying fish that ate the mosquitoes; hunting and fishing "yarns" that would make Daniel Boone and Izaak Walton roll over in their graves; and ghost stories fit to frighten the ghosts.

"You'd hardly believe it, but we have 5,000 of them from all parts of the world," said O. C. Huett, president of the Burlington club. "We'll give a diamond medal to the author of the best one."

31 FIRMS FILE BIDS FOR WORK AT HIGH SCHOOL

IDA PEDRICK, 84, NATIVE OF CITY, DIES IN HOSPITAL

Miss Ida Pedrick, 84, a lifelong resident of Circleville, died in Berger hospital Tuesday at 5.46 a. m. of infirmities. She had been a patient in the hospital a week.

Miss Pedrick was born July 10, 1852, a daughter of Alfred and Hannah Powell Pedrick. She never married.

The funeral will be Thursday at 3 p. m. in the Albaugh Co. chapel with the Rev. T. C. Harper officiating. Burial will be in Forest cemetery. Pallbearers will include Edward Sensenbrenner, J. W. Walker, Alvin Fissell, and Marion Sensenbrenner.

OHIO FARM CROP SHOWS INCREASE OF 15 PERCENT

COLUMBUS, Dec. 29.—(UP)—Farm crops produced in Ohio during 1936 were valued at $238,022,000, an increase of 15.5 per cent over the value of crops in 1935, the federal-state crop reporting service announced today.

The increase in 1936 was realized despite the fact that the harvested acreage was 10,303,500, a decrease of 1.8 per cent from the 1935 acreage.

High unit values for practically all crops brought about the increase in total value, the report stated.

Although yields in many areas of Ohio were lowered due to the heat and drought of last summer, the combined yield per acre of all important crops was 96 per cent of the ten-year average yield.

For the United States as a whole, the total crop value was placed at $6,084,932,000 for 1936, compared with $5,418,755,000 for 1935. The yield was low due to the drought, however.

The estimated planting of winter wheat in Ohio in the fall of 1936 was 2,538,000 acres, or an increase of 10 per cent over the fall of 1935. Rains this fall delayed planting. Some late plantings had not made the desired growth by the time freezing weather arrived. The average condition of the crop was 84 per cent of normal, compared with 89 per cent a year ago.

DRIVER OF AUTO GIVES BOND FOR COURT HEARING

George Kline, 20, of near Yellow-bud, posted $100 bond in police court Monday to appear at a later hearing on a charge of failure to stop and disclose his identity at the scene of an accident. Mayor W. J. Graham announced Tuesday no date had been set for the hearing.

The charge grew out of a traffic accident on S. Court street on Dec. 12 when Harry Grant, 26, negro, of 820 Maplewood avenue, suffered a laceration on the forehead, a bruise on the left leg and cut toe when hit by an auto while he was crossing the street.

WANT ADS SCANNED FOR RANSOM CLUE

Police Withdraw from Residence to Permit Bearded Man Chance to Negotiate With Dentist, Father of Abducted Youth

ACTIVITIES OF G-MEN SUSPENDED

Friends Deny Demented Patient Hunted As Criminal; Note Demands $20,000

TACOMA, Wash., Dec. 29.—(UP)—The physician father of kidnapped 10 year old Charles Mattson feared for his son's life today. No word whatsoever had been received from the bearded man who broke into the Mattson home Sunday night and carried the struggling child away.

Police had withdrawn from the Mattson home. State police had ceased their activity. The work of the department of justice's G-men appeared suspended. Apparently authorities were giving the criminal a clear path to contact the family and collect $28,000 ransom.

Dr. William W. Mattson anxiously scanned every newspaper published in the Tacoma-Seattle area, but there was no want ad. It was believed that the kidnaper had specified this means to conduct the ransom negotiations as did the kidnapers of 9 year old George Weyerhaeuser, a playmate of Charles, whose parents paid $200,000 to release him last year.

DANGER OF WAR TO FLUCTUATE WHEAT PRICES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—(UP)—Wheat prices are likely to fluctuate widely during the next few months because of unsettled world conditions, department of agriculture economists said today.

Although world supplies are the lowest in 10 years, prospects are for increased production in 1937, the department reported. Prices of wheat in the United States are the highest since 1928.

European nations are storing large quantities of wheat above their normal needs. The department said European countries produced 470,000,000 bushels less wheat than needed for domestic consumption.

Allowing for an additional shipment of 120,000,000 bushels to non-European countries—a total of 590,000,000 bushels—exporting countries still would have a carry-over of 90,000,000 bushels, agriculture department economists said.

"European needs do not account fully for the wide rise in wheat prices in recent weeks," Joseph Duvel, chairman of the commodities exchange administration, said. "Several nations apparently are storing up supplies against future needs."

HORSES, STRETCHERS REMOVE BODIES OF 12 FROM WRECKED AIRPLANE

WRECK'S CAUSE IS STUDIED BY INVESTIGATORS

Passengers Trapped Without Having Chance to Fasten Safety Belts

ALL BODIES CRUSHED

Uniforms Used to Identify Threc of Victims

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 29.—(UP)—Investigations into the cause of the United Air Lines accident, in which 12 persons were killed, were scheduled to start today with the Department of Commerce in charge. Company executives planned a separate inquiry.

Wreckage of the big two-motored Boeing, strewn along the floor of Rice canyon, near Saugus, will be examined in an effort to learn why Pilot Ed Blom, familiar with the San Francisco-Los Angeles route he was flying, was unable to pick out either the Burbank or Saugus airports.

Wreck Without Warning

The exact time of the crash is another matter to be determined, and rescuers said there was some evidence that the passengers had no warning the plane was about to crash. They apparently had not fastened their safety belts. This indicated, they said, that Blom probably did not realize he was skimming over the mountain ridges until the big plane began hitting the tree tops. A moment later, the wings ripped away and the motors displaced, the fuselage plummeted into the ravine, carrying the 12 to what probably was instantaneous death.

The plane's instrument panel was smashed and those who aided in the rescue work said it was doubtful if much could be learned from it. Department of Commerce inspectors are particularly anxious to learn what happened to Blom's radio. His last message came on a day frequency, indicating he could not use the night frequency. Earlier he apparently was near the Burbank airport and preparing to land, as he asked for the localizer beam, used for landings.

Visibility was "fair" despite the storm that swept the California coast Sunday night, and another plane from the north landed a few minutes after Blom signaled. Why he didn't come down, but apparently turned and ran for the Saugus airport, probably never will be known.

Use Stretchers, Horses

The bodies—three of the crew and nine passengers—will be brought out of the hills today by stretchers and horses. They were taken out of the ravine last night at a point three miles from a road. Rescue parties had struggled through underbrush, along sheer cliffs and across deep ravines to reach the shattered transport. Bodies were carried one by one up the precipitate sides and laid on the ground.

Identification will be attempted today, but rescuers said it would be hard. The force of the crash threw the passengers forward and the impact against the front of the plane, which was driven back into the cabin, was terrific. Uniforms of the crew, however, were an aid in identifying three of the victims. Those killed were:

Mr. and Mrs. Everett T. Ford Jr., of San Marino, Calif.

Ford is an employee of the Standard Oil Company of California and the son of the vice-president of the Grace Line Steamship company.

H. S. Teague, employee of Walt Disney motion picture studio, Hollywood.

Alex Novak, official of Imperial Valley Fruit Growers association, El Centro, Calif.

A. L. Markwell, Los Angeles diamond merchant.

M. P. Hare, Los Angeles.

Mrs. Warren A. Newton, Westwood Village, Los Angeles.

Edwin W. Blom, Burbank, Calif., pilot.

Robert McLean, Oakland, Cal., co-pilot.

Yvonne Trego, Oakland, Cal., formerly of Hastings, Mich., stewardess.

The removal of the bodies took hours last night. R. E. Dickenson, manager of the Santa Paula airport, located the wreckage from the air and then led other aerial searchers to the scene.

Plane wrecks have taken 27 lives in two weeks. Seven persons are still missing in the wreckage of a Western Air Express transport in Utah. Six were killed in

THE OLD HOME TOWN by STANLEY

'Gone With the Wind' Proves Popular Book

The most outstanding book of fiction of this, and many other seasons, is "Gone With the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell.

The Circleville Public Library has four copies of the book. Forty-one persons have read it, and 76 more are on the institution's waiting list.

It is interesting to know a little about the author whose first novel has been so tremendously successful.

She was born in Atlanta and has lived there all her life. She was educated in the Atlanta public schools and at Washington Seminary and then worked on the Atlanta Journal for about six years. After giving up active newspaper work she began on "Gone With the Wind."

She thinks it was started in 1926 but cannot be sure. It took so long in the writing because her own health was not so good and every member of her family and all her friends were seriously ill during that period. Finally it seemed that she could never finish it so she put it away and forgot about it.

Manuscript Purchased

When a representative of the Macmillan Co., was in Atlanta a little over a year ago he heard about the manuscript and persuaded Miss Mitchell to let him read it. He took it away with him and bought it. He was the first person besides Miss Mitchell herself who had ever seen it, except her husband and he could not make heads or tails of it due to her habit of writing from the back of the book toward the front.

She chose the Civil war period to write about because she was raised on it. As a child she listened for hours on Sunday afternoons to stories of fighting in Virginia and Georgia, to tales of the reconstruction. She heard everything except that the Confederates lost the war. When she was 16 years old she learned with a violent shock that General Lee had been killed.

Survival Is Theme

She says, "If the novel has a theme, the theme is that of survival. What makes some people able to come thru catastrophes and others, apparently just as able, strong, and brave, go under? We've seen it in the present depression. It happens in every upheaval. Some people survive; others do not."

"What was it that made some of our southern people able to come thru a war, reconstruction, and a complete wrecking of the social and economic system? I don't know. I only know that the survivors used to call that quality gumption. So I wrote about the people who had gumption and the people who didn't."

It is the old south that is gone with the wind. What destroyed the south was something from within, a weakness, an irresolute-ness, a want of faith that is illustrated in character after character and thrown into sharpest relief by the contrasting virtue of the hero and the heroine of the novel.

Locale In Georgia

The story opens in the plantation country of northern Georgia immediately before the war. Most of the action takes place in and about Atlanta, the sprawling new city which was the nerve center of the lower south when the war began.

Miss Mitchell's real triumph is Scarlett O'Hara, a heroine lacking in many virtues—in nearly all, one might say, but courage. She is a vital creature, alive in every inch of her, selfish, unprincipled, ruthless, greedy and dominating, but with a backbone of steel.

An almost equally vital figure is Rhett Butler, a cynical and hard-bitten realist who saw the hopelessness of the south's position from the first, and who, as a daring blockade runner, lined his pockets during the war. The battle of wills between these two, set

PAUL WHITEMAN TO BE GUEST ON MOTOR CONCERT

Members of Own Band to Aid Symphony at 10 p. m.

General Motors Concerts will present as guest conductor of the January 3 program, the world famous advocate and exponent of modern American music as an art form — Paul Whiteman.

Mr. Whiteman will conduct the symphony orchestra augmented by members of his own organization, in a program in striking contrast to the classical music usually heard in the "Sunday Nights at Carnegie Hall" broadcasts. The nation-wide hook-up of more than 60 stations of the NBC-WEAF ("Red") network will transmit the concert between 10 and 11 p. m.

Two of the musical numbers on the program will be heard for the first time on the air.

As guest conductor of the symphony orchestra, Mr. Whiteman, joins a select company of illustrious conductors who have been leaders of that renowned musical organization. His name joins that of Arturo Toscanini, Leopold Stokowski, Igor Stravinsky, Bruno Walter, Eugene Ormandy, Ossip Gabrilowitch and Artur Rodzinski — all of whom have appeared for General Motors.

Mr. Whiteman's appearance as guest conductor in a program of modern American music stems from two exciting concerts he gave this late fall with the Philadelphia orchestra in Philadelphia and New York. Both concerts were notable events of the music seasons in both cities and drew much critical notice in top musical circles.

HOOVER'S MEN CHECK WRITING ON KIDNAP NOTE

Chief of Federal Office
Silent About Activity of His Deputies

PROCEDURE TO BE SECRET

Millions of Fingerprint Sets
Available

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—(UP)—The Federal Bureau of Investigation set in motion today its crime detection machinery to apprehend the kidnaper of 10-year-old Charles Mattson.

It was believed that 50 or more G-men had been sent into the Tacoma area. The G-men on the scene were in constant communication with their superiors here.

J. Edgar Hoover, bureau chief, followed custom in keeping secret the activities of the G-men. But his department's past performances furnished an idea of the procedure it is employing.

Fingerprints Checked
Experts are probably busy checking fingerprints the kidnaper left in the Mattson's home and the type used in printing the ransom note.

If the abductor has a police record, his identity may already have been established. It was believed that the fingerprints left in the Mattson home had been sent here and compared with the upwards of seven million sets in the FBI files.

Such a check can be made in a few minutes. After fingerprint specialists classify the cards roughly, electrical machines sort them at the rate of a thousand per minute.

FBI files also would be used to check the machine employed to print the ransom note. It was reported that the note appeared to have been printed with a child's hand press set.

The bureau has catalogues, notes and comparative works for thousands of typewriters and printing presses. Each invariably has some peculiar identifying mark.

Frequently notes have led to identification of the type of machine used and in some cases have revealed identity of the purchaser of the machine.

THREE RESCUED ONE DROWNS IN BEREA TRAGEDY

BEREA, Dec. 29. — (UP) — The rescue of three brothers from an ice-covered pool in a stone quarry today had cost the life of 14-year-old Joseph Kowalski.

Those rescued were Robert Olszowski, 7, Stanley, 13, and Benedict, 14, brothers. The brothers were playing on a thin coat of ice when they plunged into the water yesterday.

Kowalski, who was standing on shore, heard the screams and ran to their aid. He was able to pull Stanley and Robert from the icy water and aided Benedict in reaching safety.

When the brothers sought their rescuer, they saw that he had collapsed in the cold water and drowned.

Nearly workmen recovered the youth's body.

Tough Publicity Breaks Fail To Dampen Ardor of Attorney Conducting A. T. & T. Inquiry

Samuel H. Becker, director of the huge A. T. & T. investigation
WASHINGTON, — Washington correspondents call him the the Hard Luck Publicity Victim of the nation's capital. He is Samuel H. Becker, special counsel for the Federal Communications commission in its $150,000 investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph company.

Washington newsmen admire Becker because he has continued to conduct a competent and energetic investigation into the sometimes tangled and always involved bookkeeping affairs of the A. T. & T., despite the strangest string of tough publicity breaks in the history of any federal investigation.

LaFollette Choice
Youthful Sam Becker was just an unknown Wisconsin attorney, plucked out of the La Follette grab bag by New Deal advisors to the Federal Communications commission, when he came to Washington in the spring of 1936 as assistant special counsel to the FCC for its pending investigation of the mammoth A. T. & T., controlling more than 90 per cent of all wire communication in the U. S.

Becker's only previous public experience was as executive counsel to Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin in La Follette's first term as governor in 1930. The La Follette, however, knew Becker as a young man of extraordinary legal talents, and Senator Robert La Follette brought Becker to the attention of those who were looking for legal talent to help into the FCC quiz into the A. T. & T.'s manifold affairs.

A few days after the announcement of Becker's appointment as assistant special counsel for the A. T. & T. investigation, word was given out that young Becker was being made chief counsel in complete charge of the investigation.

There was considerable skepticism over this promotion. Legal experts believed that this was unfair to both Becker and the investigation. Such an investigation needed a man with long years of court experience, a man accustomed to the wiles of high-powered accountants and legal utility experts.

Nervous at First
But Becker had shown his mettle in investigations of Wisconsin utilities, as an expert for the Wisconsin Public Service commission. Despite a preliminary attack of stage fright, he came off nobly in his first few days of encounter with the officials and lawyers of the A. T. & T. Newspaper publicity, which is usually the lifeblood of an investigation of this kind came in unprecedented quantities. And everywhere there was praise for Becker's conduct of the investigation.

Then began that series of tough breaks which have continued up to the present . . . tough breaks that have conspired to keep reports of the Becker investigation off the front pages of the nation's press. Some men might have given up in despair at such a run of bad luck. But Sam Becker still is at it, drawing out a daily stint of interesting, if not sensational, disclosures from the investigation.

Sidetracked by Floods
Soon after Becker had made his auspicious debut in the nation's news last spring, he was swept out of the limelight by the swollen mountain streams of the eastern seaboard which poured down over the countryside in the most disastrous flood the nation ever had known. That eastern flood kept Becker and the investigation out of the news, until hearings had been suspended for the summer.

When the quiz was resumed this past autumn, it had just gotten off to a good start when the constitutional crisis in Great Britain over King Edward and Mrs. Simpson broke over the front pages, marking for "inside copy" virtually everything that was not royal news again was sidetracked.

Becker held his breath, continued to pay prime attention to the investigation. Surely the Simpson story would subside in time! And it did.

Beaten Again
But no sooner had the British affair cooled, than the senatorial committee investigating the collapse of the Van Sweringen railroad empire developed sensational testimony. That was enough to crowd Mr. Becker, with his less sensational, but equally significant findings off Page One for a third time.

Inasmuch as congress is about to convene, and appropriations for investigations usually are made on the basis of publicity, rather than on merit, the telephone quiz may not survive its dwindling finances. But Sam Becker "points with pride" to the volume upon volume of data his investigators have compiled. That data will provide the basis for future utility legislation, which Mr. Becker believes is more important than continued investigation appropriations — although he desires both.

FLAG CRUISER ORDERED BUILT
BY AUSTRALIA
CANBERRA (UP) — The Australian government has taken one more step in its national defense program by ordering construction of a leader for a squadron of destroyer cruisers, aimed to protect Australia against sea raids.

The cruiser which will be armed with six-inch guns, will be built at the Cockatoo Island dockyard. While the custom of having cruisers constructed in England will still be continued for a certain time, the Commonwealth government has decided that the local industry has now reached a point where it can manufacture every part of modern warships. This was thoroughly proven in the recent construction here of two sloops.

It is the intention of the government to make navy construction a permanent industry here that will give employment to a large number of specialized workers.

RUST BANISHED ON SEAPLANES

SAN DIEGO, Cal. (UP)—"Armor plate" for the Navy's new patrol bombers to protect them against corrosion, their worst enemy is one of the features of the giant flying boats now under construction here.

The "armor plate" is an oxide coating which is applied to the aluminum alloy of which the ships are constructed, said D. M. Carpenter, of the Consolidated Aircraft plant. An oxide coating forms on most metals when they are exposed to air. On iron and steel this coating is known as rust and it grows thicker and thicker as time goes on, until finally nothing but rust is left.

On aluminum, however, the oxide coating does not increase, but the first natural thin film forms a shield which protects the metal against further oxidation.

The natural oxide film, covered with paint, proved a satisfactory protection on planes which did not come in contact with salt water, but did not afford protection for parts of seaplanes which were subjected to sea water or salt spray.

However, intensive research developed a method of artificially increasing the thickness of the natural oxide coating which affords protection even against sea water.

First, chemical baths were developed which improved the coating thickness. Then it was found that passing a current of electricity through the metal while it was immersed in a mild acid solution caused the oxide coating to increase in thickness.

This process is known as anodizing, and is used throughout the aeronautical industry. A solution of chromic acid is used on the patrol bombers being built, but there are other acids suitable for the purpose.

After the anodic treatment, the metal is washed in fresh water and a priming coat of paint applied immediately after drying. Earlier, difficulty had been found in obtaining satisfactory adhesion of paint to aluminum surfaces subjected to service conditions. The anodic film, however, has absorbent qualities and paint adheres readily to aluminum after it has been anodized thus further increasing protection against corrosion.

COLOR ETCHINGS OFF ONE PLATE

WHITEWATER, Wis. (UP)—Leon R. Pescheret, an artist who found his "dream house" here, is believed to be the only person in the United States who makes color etchings from one plate.

Many persons make colored etchings from several plates, but Pescheret brought here the etching skill he learned from Roger Hebbelink, color etcher to the Belgian Royal Court. Pescheret studied color etching under Hebbelink after the Chicago world fair, where he etched only in black and white.

Several Processes Used
To make colored etchings from one plate requires infinite patience and skill, Pescheret believes. It involves using all methods known to etchers—soft ground, aquatint, the bitten line and dry in to the plate similar to the way black is rubbed on for a black and white etching.

"The important point is that the etcher must know exactly what the desired result is to be before he starts his plate," Pescheret said.

Re-Drawing Often Necessary
"Sometimes it takes weeks of redrawing and careful study of composition before it can be done on a copper plate."

The reason, he explained, is that different colors require different depths in the plates—reds and yellows deep lines while black, brown and purple are shallow.

Pescheret found his "dream house" here—a little yellow building with red roof and blue shutters—while enroute from Chicago to Madison to design decorations for the University of Wisconsin Memorial Union building.

STRIKE AFFECTS HAWAII'S MENUS

HONOLULU (UP) — The tie-up of shipping in the Pacific as a result of the strike on the California coast is causing a serious situation here as regards food-stuffs, especially vegetables.

Contrary to popular belief about tropical islands, Hawaii is not self-sufficient from the standpoint of vegetables. With the prospects of a food shortage, the first result of the strike was an increase in the price of fresh inland-grown vegetables. On the first day of the strike they began rising till noon and after that prices advanced at the rate of a half cent an hour.

"Hawaii's supply of vegetables is somewhat limited at present," Ross H. Gast, manager of the Inter-island Growers Service, explained. "While there will not be a complete shortage of all vegetables should the strike continue, prices probably will increase as the strike goes on. This means more than a million worth of fresh vegetables the United States each year that the situation created by the strike is apparent.

"Government, army, navy and civil authorities have been campaigning for years to increase the amount of island produce, and if the strike has no other effect, we are hoping it at least will open the eyes of everyone to the necessity of becoming self-sufficient as to vegetable supply."

BANKHEAD'S GLAD TIDINGS
THE initial and the natural reaction to assurances of Congressional leaders that the coming session will be brief, businesslike and productive of important results is one of skepticism.
Nevertheless, there is something vaguely heartening in the declaration by Speaker Bankhead that the new session of Congress will be short and restricted to pressing legislation. There are other features of his discussion of plans that hold elements of encouragement.
He believes there is little possibility of the enactment of any legislation that might interfere with the continued progress of business, that rigid regulation is not contemplated and that policies in general will be distinguished by caution and restraint.
While the question of Administration policies is one which must be determined entirely by the President, who has so far kept his own counsel in the matter, it is reasonable to assume that Speaker Bankhead speaks from home knowledge and with a degree of authority. His opinions are cheering.

AN EXPENSIVE PIPER
WHETHER it was the World War or the machine that turned up apparently to greater disregard for life than formerly is hard to say. But however the condition is to be accounted for, it seems to exist. Of this the Christmas celebration for which the nation paid with scores of lives, affords sad evidence.
Traffic accidents as usual in an American holiday season took the heaviest toll. Christmas-tree fires, hunting accidents, drowning of skaters who had forgotten to make sure of their ice, helped to swell the number of casualties.
It seems a pity that a people who build such expensive hospitals for conserving life as the American people build, must turn these hospitals over so large to the task of caring for accident cases. Paying the piper is always expensive. It is particularly expensive when Death's the piper. Isn't it about time for the American people to take another piper along when it gives itself up to holiday-making?

It is rather ironical that the countries of Europe, after laboring unceasingly for eighteen years to attain national security, are now less secure than they have been at any time since 1918.
Dining car stewards report that apple pie is overwhelmingly the favorite desert, which shows that, after all, we have not departed far from our ancient traditions.
The tale-bearer is the one to hate. People don't go around repeating a catty remark unless they agree with it.

World At A Glance
By—Charles P. Stewart
YEAR-END PROPHECIES for 1937 are being made by our major business prophets.
Colonel Leonard P. Ayres hedges somewhat, for he says — the American constitution has been "amended". Not in fact, but in practice.
He explains: "The new amendment charges the national government with responsibility for the economic conditions under which our citizens live and work."
Prophecies, therefore, are somewhat dangerous — about as hazardous as they were in 1929.
After going into detail as to what we may expect in industry, costs and interest next year — all of which loom favorably — Colonel Ayres remarks, with a trace of gloom:
"Probably it would be of little value to attempt to forecast in greater detail the business developments that seem likely to take shape next year. More important questions are those relating to the general conditions under which business will be done next year and in future years under a system of managed economy. A general answer to those questions may be derived from the apparent fact that the American people truly believe that their government has discovered a method for overcoming depressions, and for creating prosperity."

POPE CAN NEVER RECOVER
ROME—Those inside the Vatican say privately that the Pope never can recover from his present illness. It may drag out for months, but he will never be the same.
Vatican officials are not saying much about it, but the Pope's condition is due to a combination of afflictions including uremic poisoning, varicose veins and a weak heart. The veins have formed blood-clots below his knees, which in a man of less robust constitution might alone prove fatal — especially at his age. He is now 79.
At one time an inflammation appeared behind the Pontiff's ears which led his physicians to believe that he had a slight cerebral hemorrhage. This, however, has cleared up.
One difficulty in treating His Holiness has been his distaste for medicine. When first confined to his bed, the Vatican doctor asked him about some medicine he had prescribed some weeks before.
"Look in that chest," replies His Holiness.
And in the chest the physician found all the medicine he had prescribed for the last two years — untouched.

RIGID ROUTINE
Counteracting this is the rigid routine which the Pope has followed all his life and which has built up a remarkable constitution for a man of his years.
All his life Pope Pius has risen at 7, said mass at 7:30, and breakfasted at 8, eating only coffee, rolls and butter. After a morning occupied with conferences with Church officials and his regular private and public interviews, he lunched at 1:30, eating very frugally and drinking only one glass of wine. Immediately thereafter he walked in the Vatican gardens, usually for at least an hour, though frequently longer, if the weather were good.
Conferences were resumed again in the afternoon at about 3:30 or 4, and continued until nearly 8, when His Holiness again worshiped in his private chapel. Members of his household attended.
Dinner was served at 9, during which two private secretaries went over correspondence with him. No one would be allowed to sit with him at the same table. After dinner he read until midnight, at which hour he usually went to bed.

VATICAN AGREEMENT
When the Pope passes, he probably will be known to history for his re-establishment of friendly relations between the Vatican and the Italian Government. For sixty years — until February 11, 1929 — they had been at sword's points. But on that day Pope Pius and Mussolini signed the concordat re-establishing the temporal power of the Pope over the Vatican.
Purely from a political viewpoint this was one of the wisest moves Mussolini ever made. For it lined up behind him the power of the entire Catholic Church. And during the Ethiopian war the Church went down the line for Mussolini 100 per cent. Had they checked the patriotic surge of the Italian people. Instead they raised tremendous amounts of money.

man or economist believes that. But managed currency and federal regulation of speculation and business have come to stay. They will be strengthened year after year.
MANIPULATION TOO
Furthermore, such manipulation of investors' funds, to the detriment of the investor, as has been disclosed by testimony of the senate committee investigating the Van Sweringen railroad deals, will be made a criminal act.
Colonel Ayres, a vice president of the Cleveland Trust company, acted as intermediary for the Van Sweringens and their angels, George Ball, of Muncie, Ind., and George S. Tomlinson, of Cleveland, and the banks in getting back into their hands rail securities, put up as collateral, worth somewhat over $13,000,000 now, for $262,000, or so, in cash. Those securities controlled an empire worth three billion dollars.
There was so much manipulating by the Van Sweringens and the banks that no one really can say who owned what — but it is readily discernible who "milked" what, and what the investors have left.
Obviously, government regulation in this instance will be very bad, indeed — for the "milkers".

Treatment of Overweight for Helping Posture
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
IN THE LAST two articles we have called attention to the ill health which may result in those middle-aged people who acquire overweight, particularly in the abdominal region leading to a bad balance in the body, causing round shoulders and deformity of the spine in the neck and shoulder region.
They may not be overweight elsewhere than in the abdomen, but they stand with their heads thrust forward and their shoulders rounded, and if the condition is allowed to go on long enough, they are unable to straighten themselves out against a straight back such as a wall. They suffer from a peculiar form of shortness of breath which comes on when they are standing, but is relieved when they are lying down, because the fat in the abdomen presses the diaphragm up so they can breathe better.
The treatment of this condition, if taken early, greatly improves it. It is wise to attempt to do it before things have gone too far. The treatment consists in three elements:
Methods of Treatment
First. The use of a belt to support the abdomen and raise the diaphragm. This itself will help

The BLOODHOUNDS BAY By WALTER S. MASTERMAN

CHAPTER 35
"WE MUST stop Graham from using his bloodhounds to track down Sylvia and the children," Reid said. "Selden, I rely on you — it would be fatal."
"Leave that to me," Selden said. "You are not in a condition to worry about things."
"Didn't you say that you had been in the village ever since the murder, or did I imagine that?" Selden smiled. "It was just as well that I was. I came to see you last night and waited here for you. I didn't know you were moving to the Abbey, but I did know that you were dining with Colonel Graham."
"If you hadn't come, I shouldn't be talking with you now," Reid said grimly.
"I am going to call on my friend, Colonel Graham — I rather want to see his staff and that curious room you told me about."
"You've got some idea of this whole affair — you must have!" Reid cried restlessly. His head ached horribly, and he felt that fever was coming on again.
"You want a good rest?"
"I can't sleep with this thing constantly in my mind. You can trust me — if you think it is the meaning of it all?"
Selden remained silent for a few minutes, smoking furiously.
"Well," he said at last, "we are in this thing together. I will only point out these curious facts, then you must sleep."
"First, let me call to your attention that when Sir Henry's father died the estate was absolutely impoverished — I have found out all about that. Then Henry Severing returns in time for his father's death, and has a very large fortune. Where did he get it from? It may have been quite straightforward, but, if so, why does no one know anything about it?"
"I follow you there," Reid said intently.
"Now see what happens. At the start everything in the garden is lovely — Henry brings James here, who had been with him all his grownup life, and establishes him really as manager and confidant. Don't interrupt — I've found out all that. Now James has got something like 150,000 pounds in the will."
Reid half rose. "What — are you sure?"
"Quite," Selden laughed. "Large sum, isn't it?"
"But why should he leave it to him?"
"Friendship, perhaps; but there is another possibility. Soon after Henry Severing returns, Colonel Graham, his old friend, also throws up his commission and settles down at Paynton Manor."
"You think there is a connection?"
"Wait; let's get on with the facts as we know them. I said Henry started off well — he married a pretty young girl with no money, and takes her all over the place — abroad, and also has a house in London and entertains. Then he throws up everything and becomes a sort of hermit."
"But surely there was a reason for that?" Reid said gravely.
"You mean Colindale and Sir Henry's wife. I don't think so. What would a man like Severing

And hastening hither.
With modest eyes downcast;
She comes — she's here — she's past!
May heaven go with her!

More Than 200 Couples Enjoy Mistletoe Dance

Wheeler's Orchestra Provides Splendid Entertainment

The gayest of the holiday season's social affairs was the Mistletoe Charity Ball, Monday evening in Memorial Hall.

Beautiful gowns, in a bewildering array of colors, combined with the background of pine trees, covered with vari-colored lights, made a delightful picture, as the crowd filled the auditorium to its capacity. ## GEORGE'S GOAL IN LAST SECOND PROVIDES EDGE

Quintet Moves Southward to Meet U. S. C. in Wednesday Fray

RADEBAUGH PACES SQUAD

Victory Makes Up For Loss Suffered Earlier

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 29 — (UP)—With revenge for the defeat it suffered at the hands of the University of California Saturday night, Ohio State's barnstorming basketball team headed for Los Angeles today where it will make the final stands of its western tour.

The Bucks downed California 30 to 28 here last night to atone for a 33 to 31 setback they had received in the first game of the series.

Ohio is scheduled to play the University of Southern California Wednesday night.

George's Goal Wins

Augie George, husky reserve center, was the hero of Ohio's triumph last night. George, who entered the game as a substitute for Earl Thomas, dropped in a crisp shot in the final seconds of play to give the Bucks their winning margin.

California took the early lead and held a 17 to 14 advantage at the half.

Late in the final period Ohio managed to catch up with the Golden Bears and knotted the count at 25 all.

A foul throw by Dick Baker and a field goal by Jim McDonald was matched by California and provided the setting for George's winning shot.

Jack Radebaugh, Ohio's sterling defensive guard who seldom does much in a scoring way, paced the Ohio pointmakers with eight markers. Jimmy Hull, sophomore forward who won a starting berth by his play during the early games of the trip, weighed in with six points.

ACROSS THE COURT

By WALTER JOHNS
The name C. M. (Nips) Price is a familiar one to basketball fans throughout the United States. Price, head coach of the University of California team, is really an authority on the game.

As we say, you've heard the name. It is our intention to give you a few of Price's ideas on this major winter sport.

Price believes the tendency of the rules is to make basketball more active with fast-breaking instead of slow-blocking plays. He thinks there should be less whistle blowing and more playing the ball. He is in accord with the three-second rule, pointing out that it stops some of the slowness around the basket.

Opposes Center Jump

In California, let it be said, the coaches of the southern division of the Pacific Coast conference have eliminated the center jump. Price, for one, is in agreement with this, saying there are from seven to eight more minutes of actual play in each contest, thus usually resulting in a higher-scoring game.

The California mentor adds that the elimination of the center jump takes some of the strain off the center who thus can put more effort on floor work and play around the basket.

Naturally, the big feature of eliminating the center jump is that it does away with the advantages of an unusually tall center, who can get the jump on his opponent.

More Teamwork

It is Price's contention that a team playing the ball out-of-bounds instead of center jumping, must continually (throughout the 40 minutes of play) built up a lead for the last part of the game. In other words, Price says, there is now, more than ever, a premium on good fast ball handling and team-work and not on some seven-foot center whom a coach entices into enrolling in his college.

Price has taken votes among basketball fans at various coast games. The majority always vote for the new system calling for the elimination of the center jump.

We are happy to give you one of Coach Price's favorite plays. The diagram and explanation are included in this column.

Two other grunt matches promise a lot of entertainment, and two bouts have been arranged between local boxers — Tiger Eddie Bird, southpaw colored lad, has been declared fit, so he will meet Shirley Hulse, of Jackson township. Jimmy Arledge had been named to substitute for Bird, but he will have to wait until a later date — The other boxing bout finds Jimmy Seimer and Jimmy Emlene at it again. . . .

PRESERVATION IN DOUBT FOR 1776 GUNBOAT

TROY, N. Y. (UP)—The task of preserving the Continental gunboat Philadelphia—Sunk by the British in 1776 and recovered last year from Lake Champlain—is a difficult one. The vessel may be quartered in New York City by the State Historical Society.

Capt. Lorenzo F. Hagglund, addressing students at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, revealed that representatives of the society have suggested purchasing the vessel. Hagglund, who directed locating and floating the vessel, said he was "without means to provide for the preservation" of the boat.

"My greatest hope," he said, "is that it will be preserved for the American people."

He said a group of civic representatives of Burlington, Vt., had attempted to raise sufficient funds to build a museum to house the vessel, but the plan failed.

The vessel was moved from Vermont during the summer and now is at New York City.

Capt. Hagglund believes that by exhibiting the boat at various points, enough money can be raised to solve the problem of its preservation. Friends have suggested that the vessel be exhibited at the World's Fair in New York City.

on the running board were safe. In trying to assist Wolford back into the cab, Rasmussen lost control of the truck. It plunged into a ditch and overturned.

Rasmussen, who was unhurt, discovered Wolford with only his hips and legs protruding from beneath the large pile of coal.

After unfastening some 16 bolts which held the body of the truck and clawing the coal away from Wolford's head, Rasmussen found him unconscious. The rescue required at least 30 minutes and young Wolford was revived in a short while.

The coal in the truck was of the lump variety. If the coal had been slack, Wolford would have been smothered to death before his companion could rescue him.

You can't measure all success by the name variety. It means winning the game you are playing — not another man's game.

ORCHESTRA DUE TO TOUR NATION

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—The Philadelphia Orchestra's second transcontinental tour, beginning at the close of the regular season here in April, will take the famed symphonic organization to 23 cities in the United States and Canada.

Eugene Ormandy, who became resident conductor this season, and Jose Iturbi, Spanish conductor pianist will share the podium during the tour. Leopold Stokowski, who conducted this year's coast-to-coast concerts, will not accompany the 100 musicians.

Special Train Chartered

A special seven-car train will be the orchestra's home for the month of the tour. It will return to Philadelphia May 23 for a final homecoming concert at the Academy of Music.

Atlanta is the first stop listed on the tentative itinerary, followed by Nashville, New Orleans, Memphis, Little Rock and St. Louis, where the event will be sponsored by the Civic Concert Series.

Concerts in Tulsa, Dallas and El Paso will be followed by two days in Los Angeles and a four-day series in San Francisco before the special train swings eastward again to Salt Lake City, Denver, Lincoln and Des Moines.

Likely Visit to Chicago

At Minneapolis the event will be under the sponsorship of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, of which Ormandy was conductor before coming to Philadelphia this fall. A tentative date is scheduled for Chicago.

Four days at the annual music festival at Ann Arbor will be followed by presentations in Toledo, Toronto, Montreal and a city in New England, unselected as yet.

The climax of the tour will be the first appearance of the orchestra in the Westchester County Musical Festival at White Plains, N. Y. An all-Wagnerian program, a symphony concert and a choral program accompanying the Westchester chorus are planned for the three-day stop just prior to the return here.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

PLAYING FOR A BREAK

MR. J. J. O'SULLIVAN, Boston, Mass., sends in the following deal. He sat South. He saw his one best chance, probably his only chance, and went game by taking that chance. His reasoning and play were both excellent. They were playing that neither dealer nor second hand should open unless very strong; that third hand might then open bidding on two quick tricks, or fourth hand might open on 2½ quick tricks.

Bidding went: North, 1-Heart, third hand; South, 2-No Trumps; North, 3-No Trumps, which held the call, both sides being vulnerable.

The opening lead was the 4 of spades. East's K won, and he led back the 9. West's Ace took the trick, then he led back the 3, which declarer's Q of spades won for his first trick.

Mr. O'Sullivan saw no chance to fulfill his contract unless East held the missing Ace of clubs, and also unless diamonds broke evenly between defenders. Then if the first trick in that suit could be given to East, game seemed assured, as East held no reasonable return lead except a low club.

The 3 of diamonds was led and West played low. Dummy's 9 lost to East's J. As anticipated, the 3 of clubs was returned. Game all depended upon East having the Ace of the suit. Declarer played as if he saw the Ace where he wanted it to be. His K held the trick and he now had to see how his long suit broke. What a fix the declarer would have been in had East led back a heart!

A low diamond was led and taken with dummy's Ace. A low heart was returned and declarer was in with his Ace, to see how diamonds were divided between defenders. The K was led. West's Q and East's last diamond fell. A club was discarded from dummy. Two added diamonds were led by declarer. On them were let go dummy's last two clubs, leaving dummy's three hearts to win the last three tricks, giving South 4-odd.

Mr. O'Sullivan also sends in the hand above. The call is 7-No Trumps. East is declarer. The opening lead is the J of diamonds. Before tomorrow see if the contract can be fulfilled. How should declarer know in advance whether or not a grand slam should be made?

New Structure

ROOMING SKETCH DRAWN

Several Rooms on Second Floor Not Assigned

Plans for the new two-story and basement addition to the courthouse, to be constructed as a PWA project, were approved by the county commissioners Monday afternoon.

The brick addition, to be built between the courthouse and new garage building, will be 50 by 75 feet in size. It will be fireproof. A light court 20 by 22 feet in size at the basement and first floor and 20 by 36 feet at the second floor will be arranged between the old and new buildings. The interior of the new building will match the present building in architecture and general lines on the exterior of the addition will conform with those of the present building.

Offices of the County Board of Health and the County School Board will be located on the basement floor. Other space on the first floor will be used for heating equipment and toilets.

To Contain Offices
The first floor will contain private and public offices for the sheriff and prosecuting attorney. Two rooms on this floor have not been assigned. One additional room will be used for the county recorder. Three rooms on the second floor have not been assigned. There will be a waiting room for jurors with toilets adjoining.

The three floors of the new addition will be connected with the courthouse floors by hallways. The basement connection will be into the present wide hall on the south side of the courthouse basement. On the first floor a hallway will extend through the sheriff's office and on the second floor the hall will join the common pleas court room.

Stairways connecting the three floors of the addition will be located in the center halls. Construction of the addition will bring all county offices into the courthouse. At present the board of health, county prosecutor, board of elections, board of education and division of aid for the aged are in outside offices in various buildings in the downtown district.

Receive Bids Jan. 11
Plans for the addition were prepared by Harry W. Lum, Columbus architect. The commissioners will receive bids for the construction of the building up to noon Jan. 11. Cost of the building is estimated at $51,550 with PWA providing $23,198. Bonds will be issued by the commissioners to finance the county's share.

ADS SCANNED TO SEEK CLUE TO ABDUCTOR

revenge on me or my family by taking my boy," Dr. Mattson said. Asked if he was taking part in the case, the doctor replied:

"I have always been a physician and never a sleuth. When patients come to me for information about their health, I give them what advice I can.

Federal Help Sought

"Now I am the one who wants information and advice, on a subject about which I know nothing—crime. So I have gone to the men who know most about it—the federal agents. I am depending entirely upon them in this crisis, and I have put myself entirely at their disposal. I will follow any course they think best because they know how these things are to be handled.

"They will know how to go about getting my son back unharmed, and I have placed my trust in them."

Friends of Dr. Mattson told the United Press that he was having difficulty raising $28,000, the sum demanded by the kidnaper. Dr. Mattson is one of Tacoma's leading physicians. He has an excellent practice, a beautiful home, but his friends believed that he would be hard pressed to raise $5,000 in cash for ordinary purposes.

The withdrawal of authorities seemed complete. Whereas yesterday there was frantic searching of the wild country around Tacoma, today there was no activity. "We have nothing to do with the case," William Farrar, detective captain of the local police, said.

He indicated police were turning the case over to the Department of Justice men in toto. There was no indication that they were working on the case beyond a report that they were checking a finger print said to have been on the ransom note, against the millions of prints on file in Washington.

Ready to Go Into Action

The G-men were understood to be ready to swarm over the case the instant the child was returned safely to his parents or it was discovered that harm had befallen him. In previous kidnappings, the G-men always have followed the precept that the well-being of the victim came first.

The Mattson family apparently has been counseled to do nothing that might antagonize Charles' captor, a gun-wielding bearded man who may be a drug addict. Mrs. Mattson refused a suggestion that she broadcast an appeal from a Portland radio station. The apparent inactivity of officers and the unguarded Mattson home were other indications that the kidnaper was to be given several days in which to deal unmoled with Dr. Mattson.

Fear was expressed that unless the abductor purchases clothing for Charles, or keeps him indoors, the child may suffer from exposure. Charles had just bathed before he was carried away. When he joined his brother and sister, and their guest, Miss Virginia Chatfield, 14, he merely donned knickers, house slippers and a sports shirt.

Miss Chatfield, nervous and distraught from her experience, was back at her home in Seattle. If she knew anything of the kidnaper other than has been made public she respected the wishes of the Mattsons and kept it to herself.
